XXL Transmission Ultra 220S
 SATVISION 10/2012
 People wanting to watch TV in perfect HD quality need the corresponding equipment.

The picture on the screen does not only depend on the TV set and set-top box, it also depends on how the cable has been designed. Enter Oehlbach which has created the basis for outstanding satellite TV with its XXL Transmission Ultra 220S cable. This 2.20 metre long F-coaxial cable uses 24-carat gold-plated contacts to minimize transmission resistances. It also comes with five-fold signal shielding consisting of three layers of aluminium and two layers of braided copper. The inner conductors made from HPOCC oxygen-free copper also deserve a special mention here because they are responsible for guaranteeing high-quality image transmission. Compared with standard satellite cables, the shielding rating of 125 dB is top of the field and is consequently hardly prone to any kind of interfering impulses (telephone, WLAN, etc.). The cable's high contact reliability and excellent build also contributed to the positive test results and it also satisfies the highest demands on contact reliability and build quality. The XXL Transmission Ultra 220S also delivered a more than 30% higher reception power than conventional antenna cables were able to.

Conclusion

High-quality and interference-free signal processing are guaranteed with the XXL Transmission Ultra 220S, which is available in lengths ranging from 1.70 to 10 metres. At a price of just on 100 euros for the 2.2 metre long version, it's not a bargain – but it is a sensible investment.
